

"Hurt by a Punch? You Bet!" Says Bat Nelson. Tells How Canole, Corbett and Gans Came Near Getting Him.

SAW Battling Nelson, the noted author, yesterday. Bat is just in the act of completing a book that will be entitled "The Life, Battles and Career of Battling Nelson, World's Lightweight Champion."

That's going some for a title, but Bat says there are so many things in the book that he had to use one

"I dictated it to a typewriter," said hig literary guys do. I can reel it off about as fast as that fellow with the whiskers-Hall Caine or whatever his name is. Typewriting it myself was too slow. My ideas ran ahead of the type-'Give me a sample chapter, Bat.

"Well." replied Nelson, "you see I work in everything that the public isn't ento. What part do you want?" "People are most interested in knowing whether or not it's possible to hurt Did you write anything about

Bat grinned. "I don't get hurt easy like the other cuys," he said, "but I've been hurt three or four times. I can't remember word for word what I dictated, but I can give it pretty close. I'll just dictate it over and you can put it down."
"All right," said I. "Go on."

I had a bandage around my body for fifteen days afterward. I was to have fought Britt in three weeks. I would have fought him the next week with a busted rib rather than let him get away, but I was glad to wait awhile.

than let him get away, but I was glad to wait awhite.

"The next worst hurt was in the Sept. 9 fight with Gans. Along in the seventeenth round I got turned around sideways somehow. Gans was awful quick to take an opening and he stepped in and put his fist into my kidneys about a foot. A punch in the back hurts as much as in the pit of the stomach. That bump hurt so I bent over backward and I couldn't straighten up for a couple of minutes. But I went after Gans all the harder and he didn't know what an adviange he had for a minute. I had him buffaloed.

Confidence the Thing.

"I guess confidence is the great thing for a fighter. In all my hights I never thought for a second there was any chance of my being knocked out or beaten. I always feel dead sure that I'll win and when I'm stung I only think the other fellow has shot another bolt and is Just only nearer the time when he'll fade away.

"Cans bumped me hard enough on the faw to knock out any of the tough thes, I guess. He would Just deliberately pull his right hand back and shoot it over. He hurt me and dazed me nive or six times in our fights that way, but I only feel dazed for about two seconds."

"The way to win fights is to be dead sure you're going to win and then let

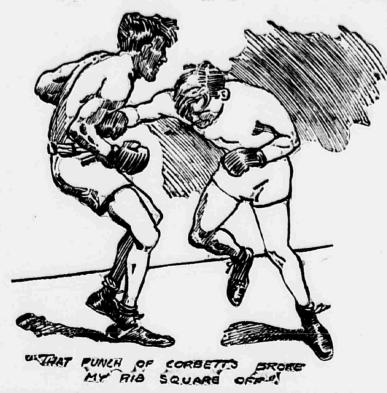

The way to win fights is to be dead aure you're going to win and then let the other guy know how you feel. I had Gans scared to death in our last fight. I told Willie Britt to come in while I was getting ready and ask me some questions. Willie asked me how leng I thought Gans would stay. I said, Oh, if he fights clean I'll let him stick eight or ten rounds. If he fights foul I'll half kill him."

"You got it all mapped out," says Willie.

there are more than one county in Ireland. Judge Ford, the two Mr. Barretts, Attorney-General-elect O'Malley, President McGowan, of the Board of Aldermen, and others testified to the fact is that County Mayo is a bird and then some.

The menu card was all right, but it wasn't necessary to establish the fact that the affair, as it was engineered by William P. McLoughlin (Mac, we call him.) was in honor of Martin Sheridan. Real Irish bacon, and spinach grown in the land of Granuale, were on the bill. It was one of the best played games of the season. And Martin won. But, lest we forget, Mortimer Gleeson, Jersey City's able Police Commissioner, alded with a couple of timely-bingles.
